

End User License Agreement (EULA)

Since I heard I should firstly write an EULA and secondly write in it whatever I please, I put together some thoughts. I believe in the accessibility of tools and knowledge but feel the need to protect them as well from exploitation. In other words: I might cry if I see Schirft on the advertisement of let's say a big sports and streetwear brand without me knowing. I might not cry if they pay for a license, because they sure can afford.

(1) By downloading, installing and using the typeface you accept the terms of this agreement.

(2) KK Schirft is free to use in web and print for personal projects or projects with no (absolutely zero) budget involved. for projects involving budget and projects for clients with more than 5 employees, please get in touch and we find a suitable compensation.

(3) It's forbidden to use Schirft in the context of party politics, military, weapon industry and religion.

(4) You are allowed to modify the typeface.

(5) Remember that you must credit me whenever you use Schirft.

